Record Propety Binding. . .Age-associated increase in type II collagen destruction in arthritis-susceptible DBA/1 mice. To study the chronological changes in cartilage destruction in the knee joints of DBA/1 mice in the course of disease development, spontaneous arthritis was examined at various ages. The degree of arthritis in the joints was less in DBA/1 than in C57BL/6 mice. The scores of inflammation and degree of arthritis were greater at an early phase (1 week) than at a later period (2-4 weeks) in DBA/1 mice. In DBA/1 mice of the early phase, type II collagen, which is a major component of cartilage, was not degraded. In contrast, type II collagen was degraded at a high degree in the articular cartilage of DBA/1 mice of the later phase.

These findings indicate that degradation of type II collagen is more enhanced in the presence of cellular invasion. The accelerated destruction of cartilage was seen only in DBA/1 mice; there was no age-associated change in the C57BL/6 mice in this model.

These results suggest that in this
