The film was released at the Toronto International Film Festival and the Bangkok International Film Festival. Plot In the Kingdom of Cambodia (1970s), a gang of fourteen-year-old kids who are bored of life rape girls, especially in the rural villages. The kids are having fun until one of the gang's members, Gan, is arrested for rape, although he was only twelve at the time. Dina, who likes Gan, is also arrested and sentenced to five years in prison for kidnapping. Dina's parents abandon her in a brothel with six other girls. In the brothel, Dina meets a gang leader who betrays his gang and becomes Dina's protector. The gang leader, Thich, meets the police officer who is searching for Gan. Thich tells the police officer that he knows where Gan is and that Gan is also protected by Dina. Dina is returned to her parents and spends some time with her brother who she has not seen for a long time. On the day of her release, Dina's parents and friends have a feast in their honor. While eating, Dina's parents tell her that she must find her brother and leave her hometown. Dina is angry at her parents because they had only tried to help her and did not listen to her. Her parents tell her that she is too old to be a slave to others. When Dina leaves for her home, her parents tell her that she will see them again someday. Dina goes to the city of Koh Ker, the hometown of Gan and his gang. 2d92ce491b
