It takes place in the mid-19th century, when the English aristocrat, Mary Frances, is confined in a madhouse after a scandalous affair with the famous explorer. We live in an age of information, where falsehood is easy to spread, but truth is hard to discover. Mary Frances was sold a bill of goods, and she must pay the price. An extraordinary discovery. Autumn Leaves is a Spanish-made crime / drama movie, starring Ben Kingsley, Gemma Jones, Daniel Alvarado, Raul de Molina, Santiago Cabrera, and adapted from the short story by Richard A. Wilson, who also wrote the screenplay for the film. The film, which won a nomination for Best Foreign Language Film at the 73rd Academy Awards, was directed by Juan Antonio Bayona (The Orphanage), who is probably best known for his 2007 The Orphanage. After recovering from the loss of her mother and her husband, Mary Frances has managed to live in relative isolation for the last year. But her solitude is interrupted when the doctor who has been treating her for her mental problems reports the discovery of a new "cure". At the same time, the doctor reveals a discovery made in his laboratories: he has found a way to create a vaccine for a disease that is epidemic in the UK. Mary Frances's husband suddenly dies, leaving her completely alone. Despite the risks involved, she accepts the doctor's offer and leaves the asylum for London, where she is introduced to the inventor of the vaccine, Dr. She is the only survivor of a small group of candidates who were selected for the new procedure. But when her body rejects the vaccine, it is a race against time to get it to work.
