Q: How to fix a url into a string variable? I am trying to download the HTML content of a web page. I use this command: `Scontent = ""`; I need to pass it to: `Stext = $me->text($content)`; but for this line it returns this error: Parse error: syntax error, unexpected 'Scontent' (T_VARIABLE), expecting ')' in... what can I do? A: You're missing a pair of quotes in your `Stext` assignment: `Stext = '$me->text("")`'; You could then use it like this: `foreach ($me->text() as $link) { $title = htmlspecialchars($link); echo " $title. "; }`. That afternoon, several dozen residents of the village held a protest rally on the main thoroughfare of their community, chanting "Thieves! Thieves!" in Russian. They marched to the nearby police station, demanding that the thieves' names be published. "The owner of the snowmobile is among them," said a young villager, and went on to say that they would not even ask the police to verify whether or not their suspicions were correct, but would simply demand to see the thieves' names. The police will be embarrassed if they confirm that the thieves are in the village and their names are published, the villager added. "How do we even know if they are thieves?" he asked. "They could have come from neighboring villages." A few days later, the stolen snowmobile was found by a police officer, who came upon it during his daily rounds on foot. "There were no tracks leading up to the machine," he told me. "The headlight was smashed, and the tracking device was still on the snowmobile." He said that he reported the machine's theft to the local police. However, 2d92ce491b
