I do not see the difference between parameters and keywords in PostgreSQL. For example I try select count(*) from t; and select count(*) from t (id); Is count(*) also a parameter? If not, what is the difference? Or does it matter what order I put the (id) after count? As a real-world example, suppose I want to return 3 rows from a table named users. The table's two columns are id and name. I assume PostgreSQL will receive select * from users where (:id1,:id2,:id3) Is this assumption correct? If so, is :id1,:id2,:id3 also a parameter? If not, what is the proper syntax? A: A parameter is an input parameter. It must be a value that is used by the database session to process the query.
