After you have mastered the history panel, all the other functions become much easier and quicker to use. However, the interface is not as complete as in Photoshop, so you need to learn to use the different tools in different ways. Not knowing how to use the tools properly can sometimes slow down the progress. Q: How to get most recent updated jsons after read two files in the same directory I have already a lot of experience reading in json but this situation is new to me and I have been stuck on this for awhile now. I am trying to get the most recent updated json from a directory. I have two json files in my directory: "2015_May_Dev_SQ_Source.json" and "2015_May_Dev_SQ_Dest.json" The difference between them is the dates. They have both changed in the last few weeks. I want to get the most recent update in "2015_May_Dev_SQ_Source.json" and use that to compare to "2015_May_Dev_SQ_Dest.json". After that, I want to return the values in the newest file. // Get newest json from directory fs.readdir('./path/to/directory', function (err, files) { if (err) { console.log(err); return; } var newestJson = files[0]; console.log(newestJson); var source = require("./path/to/directory/" + newestJson); console.log(source); }); A: readdir doesn't return the file last modified date. Instead, it returns an array of file names. To get the most recent file, you can use this code: var newestJson = files[0].replace('.json', ''); var source = fs.readdirSync('./path/to/directory/' + newestJson); However, this may not be a good way to solve your problem. Perhaps you'd be better off using something like mongoose or body-parser to interact with your MongoDB collection. For example, this is how you would get the user ID from the database for each JSON file. var newJson = files[0].replace('.json', '');
