1. Pinball Action 3D. How fair is it to keep all the data about what we say, and only share the few bits that anyone is interested in? That's the question that Biometrika's C. Ronald Graham asks in his overview of uses and abuses of genetic data. It's generally assumed that genetic information can be and should be private — but there's a dark side that makes genetic discrimination increasingly common, he writes. He discusses recent findings that seem to have lessened the difference between genetic and behavioral discrimination — like those that brought down anti-gay legislation in Minnesota and North Dakota. Graham mentions a number of possible solutions, including laws that specifically protect genetic data from discrimination and the lack of clear privacy laws in place. At the end he notes that we "can't wait for a mythical island where information travels in a bubble." You can read the whole article here. [via Torrent Freak]O juiz federal Sergio Moro, responsável pela Operação Lava Jato em Curitiba, entrou pela primeira vez nesta terça-feira (12) na sala de reuniões de Brasília, onde no ano passado foi alvo de críticas da oposição por receber a equipe de um ex-presidente do país. No primeiro dia de visita ao Congresso, o juiz Sergio Moro foi recebido no plenário da Câmara e fez um breve discurso aos parlamentares e suas famílias. Ele também participou da sessão dos deputados que tomou conta do tribunal de primeira instância da Operação Lava Jato.

"Quando fui recebido aqui, num começo ainda insere que fui recebido com grande agradecimento, o que me pareceu bom e bastante saudável.
Portanto, não posso dizer porque é que o discurso é o mesmo. Só posso assegurar que não foi feito para agradar. Se foi feito para agradar, vou ter que disso me acostumar", disse o juiz à imprensa depois de
